Chapter 1 by bruh26

Us humans have gotten high tech technology before the human plague had started again. The effects too unbelievable to imagine. We had no choice but to retreat far into the skies above Earth. I look down at Earth, as I sit in my beautiful city apartment window. I could not imagine how the people who didn't get to the city on time are doing right now. Suffering deep in their own dependence, on harsh survival, boggling their memories, destroying their thoughts. We must get them up to the city, or the human race below the skies will die out, leaving us in the sky to halt too ever going back down from the sky.
